

FUEL SURCHARGE

Fluctuations in fuel prices influence overall transportation costs, necessitating a variable fuel surcharge that can increase, decrease, or be entirely removed in line with the trends in fuel and alternative fuel prices.

The diesel fuel price used to determine the fuel surcharge is based on the price per 1000 liters, including customs and taxes for the EA-20 country group, as published by the European Commission for Energy and Transport in their Oil Bulletin.

The electricity price for setting the fuel surcharge is derived from the Average Electricity Price (alternative fuel), published by the Czech Statistical Office here. The system operates with a one-month delay. For example, the fuel surcharge for April is based on data released in the last week of March.

This schedule is due to the timing of data release on immediate prices. The percentage fuel surcharge is always calculated from the transportation cost. The current fuel surcharge rate is published on the PPL website in the last week of each month.
